

TESIM

Technical support to the implementation and management of ENI CBC programmes

Small projects in NEXT – who, what, how?

Labgroup on developing an approach to managing projects of limited financial volume

28 May 2021

Rationale

Article 24 of the new Interreg regulation stipulates that the programmes have to support projects of limited financial volume, either directly or through small project funds. However, there is no legal definition for such type of projects...how to approach the subject then?

Together with ENI CBC / NEXT programmes we would like to work on the development of a practical roadmap to implement what in the framework of this event we will call small projects, either via regular projects or via small project funds.

We will discuss and identify the factors (the relative financial amount, relevance to the programme priorities chosen, relevance to the foreseen target groups, etc) and the practical steps that the programmes need take in order to establish a support mechanism for small projects.

It is our aim that our colleagues from Interact will also join us to tell about the latest developments regarding small projects in the whole Interreg family.

In short, we will:

- Map practices for ENI CBC programmes that are relevant for small projects in NEXT;
- Discuss and identify the factors that are crucial for a successful implementation of small projects
- Agree on the practical steps (to do's) to establish small projects.

The event "Small projects in NEXT – who, what, how?" will be organised following a lab-group approach. Our objective for the event is to develop a practical roadmap for setting up the small projects that the participants can use for inspiration in the context of their individual NEXT programmes.
